Dr . K.C.G.'s corner

Recap: With the assistance of China Raja, an alumini of HIET, Dr Vergheese purchased an aircraft. The flight from Karachi to Chennai was hair- rising experience when the plane was caught in the storm. As per the instructions of Dr Vergheese, a detour was taken to avoid possible calamity and finally landed safely at Chennai Airport.

Dr. K.C.G VERGHESE

When Dr. Verghese came out of the plane at Chennai, many people were assembled on the tarmac to receive them. After this inaugural flight, the aircraft started regular services. It flew the Chennai-Mumbai-Cochin route, Cochin-Mumbai and Mumbai-Calicut. Chinna Raja, a former student of HIET and Dr. K C G Verghese discussed the possibilities of aircraft leasing to India. As many of the Indian businesspersons were not familiar with aircraft leasing formalities, Dr. K C G Verghese suggested Chinna Raja to visit Delhi & Mumbai and to meet prospective operators, and familiarize himself with the aircraft leasing business. Chinna Raja spent a month in different parts of India, and came back to Chennai. Dr. K C G Verghese was thrilled by his initial success as he had got few orders in hand.

With the smiling Airhostess, being on time, the operations of air Asiatic set new trends in Indian Aviation. Dr. Verghese was successful in looking for aircrafts, raising funds, negotiating purchases and dealing with the legal and administrative formalities.

His partners held the responsibility of recruiting pilots and air-hostesses. But the smoothness in running the operations weren't smooth for a long time as Dr. Verghese had to face problems with his business partners.

The first sign of the trouble was faced when the aircraft landed for the first time at Chennai airport. The partner refused to sign the papers necessary for customs clearance, citing some flimsy excuse. Dr. Verghese's efforts in convincing his partner were not successful. The efforts were all in vain and they moved to the court and Dr Verghese won the case by losing his peace of mind. Another partner also tried to play mischief by collecting huge sums from various people in exchange for GSAs (General Sales Agencies), led to series of crisis which resulted in shutting down the operations of Air Asiatic. Dr. Verghese had solid support from his eldest son, Anand who had sent one of their engineers to U.S. to look for an aircraft which is ideal for charters. Mr. Pascal, former student of HIET, chalked up several years of experience in the airline industry before he joined Orient Flights. Soon after he arrived in U.S., Pascal identified an eight-seater King Air, which is ideal for short field landing. They received approval from the Civil Aviation Department for the import of the aircraft. When the aircraft arrived at Chennai, there was a heavy demand for charter flights. Dr. Verghese used this aircraft to travel across India very often with his associates and family members. Later, they purchased the Beechjet which is an executive jet offering the same comfort and speed as a Boeing aircraft.
